DRAMATICS CLASS GIVES ENTERTAINING EVENING OF PLAYS

Much credit is due Mrs. Polley and her Dramatic Class in the heavy programme given Tuesday evening to a crowded hall.

Four One Act Plays comprised the entertainment and many of the players merited for themselves and their leader deserved applause.

It was an arduous undertaking for both the Leader and actors. Many of the actors had very large roles to enact requiring heavy tasks of memorizing, which they managed with comparatively few promptings.

The Plays were each different in location and plot.

The four plays brought in every member of the Dramatic Class, one student taking part in two plays.

There were some outstanding actors but individual mention would be invidious.

The make-up was excellent throughout for which Miss Margaret Gordon was responsible. Two transformations were so marked it was difficult to recognize the real person.

During the shifting of the scenes tuneful music was rendered by the School Orchestra.

Principal Crowther was chairman and Mr. Ian MacKenzie was stage manager assisted by Roy Agar.

INSTRUMENTAL GROUP: Miriam Ekke, Bernice Welshimer, Garfield Anderson.

CHILDREN'S NIGHT AT LIONS CLUB

Thursday night last was children's night at the Lion's Club and a large number of Lions sat down with sons and daughters to enjoy the hearty meal prepared by Messrs Earl Bulter, Claude Mackie and Ralph Martin. About seventy were present.

Following the supper, Charles Harvey, president, extended a welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nelson of Montana. Mr. Nelson is district Governor for Montana and Alberta. Also welcomed to the meeting was Mr. Joe Wagstaffe.

It was announced that the second meeting in May was being moved to the 22nd of the month instead of the 15th, at which time it is hoped to have members from all over the zone present to attend a zone social.

The Scott Pot was won by Earl Bulter, who was present.

A series of home movie shorts was shown up for the movie by Dr. Giffen, which included several comedies, especially designed to appeal to the children and Lions. Lion cubs were called on in between reels and provided a most entertaining program for the group.

Donna Anderson played the piano very capably and was followed by Bernice Welshimer, playing the sax accompanied by Mrs. Alice Polley at the piano. Bernice's skilful fingerling intrigued all.

Francis Bennett sang two popular numbers, The Old Lamplighter and The Bluebird of Happiness. The strength and range of this young singer was a delight to the audience. He was followed by Norma Jean Anderson, whose calm poised manner and whose clear tones pleased all. She sang the Umbrella Man and was accompanied by Mrs. Edna Hughes at the piano.

Later calling the gathering to order, Mr. Hughes on behalf of the guests, presented Mr. Fessenden with a beautiful Tri-Light Lamp accompanied with all good wishes for the future, followed by the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Mr. Fessenden expressed his warm appreciation and said he would always keep in touch with the Strathmore Lodge.

Choice refreshments were served and a very happy social hour enjoyed. It was decided to hold the meetings on the first Wednesday of each month. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Harvey on May 7.

ROCKYFORD LIONS HOLD DANDY AUCTION

The Community Auction Sale held in Rockyford on Saturday, April 12, under direction of the Lions Club proved to be an excellent affair and produced so much interest and support that the Lions plan to make it an annual affair.

Under the able leadership of Mr. J. Art Dunsmore the club secured donations and listings under all conceivable headings and a great deal of credit is due Mr. Dunsmore for the magnitude of the receipts totalling well over one thousand dollars.

Donations ranging from registered stock to cash, including saleable merchandise, much of which was on the hard-to-find list.

Members of the club heartily expressed their appreciation of the efforts of Auctioneers Boyce, Scown, Riddle and Boese, who all through the sale were on the job and swelling the club funds.

Members of the executive of the Lions Club met on Wednesday night to discuss a great deal of business. A report was received on a delegation consisting of T. S. Hughes who checked into the requirements of the Provincial Government's department of health in connection with grants for swimming pools, and ascertained the standards of recreation and chlorination necessary for their approval.

Following on this report, Mr. Hughes is approaching a firm dealing with this material with a view to having a report on final costs ready for another meeting.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

We are indebted to Al Williamson, Vancouver News Herald columnist, for this story which he ran in his interesting editorial page corner: "For the creation of utter confusion, we commend the misplacing of lines of type when a newspaper is being made up. Take yesterday's article, the heading of which announced the passing of a well known city planner: "When Carroll screamed, I out and the gas was hissing from Newfoundland at the age of 35. As a young man he was employed in the fishing business on False Creek and commuted daily by row-boat from his home to his place of work in the days before the inhalator squad and were not shipping and its flats to make industrial site."

Editor's Note: At didn't mention the name of the guilty party. Could it have been the News Herald?"

by Mrs. G. H.

Our Berry Vale W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Eric Olson. There was a very good attendance this time, eleven members and four visitors. One special visitor was Mrs. Geo. Thurston who read a very interesting paper on "Blind People, and how they manage without the use of their eyes." And a second on "Projects for 1947." She was taking the place of Mrs. Snider, who has been very ill; however, Mrs. Thurston did a splendid job.

The two Subjects were "Gardens" by Mrs. Olson, and "Grasses" by Mrs. C. Dawson, but since Mrs. Dawson was absent we had "Boys and Girls Farm Clubs" by Mrs. Taylor.

We had a Nickel Sale during the afternoon, which gave us a total of $7.10.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Mary Morton, on May 1. Roll Call will be "My Favorite Bird and Description. The two Subjects are "Farming and Industries" & "Stock." All members are asked to bring pencils, scribbles, and old Christmas Cards to the next meeting to be sent to the Red Cross.

A delicious tea was served by the hostess and Mrs. Leonard Hilton.

FARMER'S COLUMN—

By R. J. M.

Surveying the farm at this season of the year one sees a hustle and bustle that goes with Spring. The casual observer does not see what has gone before and what plans are being executed by all this activity.

Seed has to be cleaned and treated for smut, machinery must be repaired and overhauled, the fields planned out and everything to facilitate seeding operations. A farmer must have his work and equipment so arranged as to complete his seeding operations in ten days. There is such a thing as optimum growth and if grain is seeded too soon, germination and growth are delayed. If seeding is done too late, the grain will have time to mature before frost. My remark about the ten days has some merit and reason. Optimum growth is reached when the relationship of day and night approaches an equal length of time. Remember though, that the ten days is the actual time required to seed and does not include delays caused by rain or snow.

During the winter, the farmer should have made his plans for the spring and summer operation. Examples of these plans should include such items as a seed plot of at least 10 acres each year to provide high quality seed for the land to be seeded the following year. No one needs to argue about this as the increased yields and quality of grain grown from such seed is obvious to all grain growers.

Another point for consideration is to build up the farm. During times of prosperity a farmer should be building up his land so that if times of stress do occur, he can plow the land being enriched and extend his operations to keep his income at a high level. If grass or forage is planted the land goes out of cash production, therefore, no income tax on that property; in addition an allowance on income tax can be deducted for seed purchased. This field should be fertilized each spring to enrich the soil and increase the hay crop. Forage does not remove phosphorus from the land as does a grain crop. Nature makes a small amount of minerals available each year but not as much as is required for grain crops. If you reason back to the time when your land was new and compare the yields then and now you will note that we received a smaller yield than one did in those days.

Therefore, by forage crops and fertilizer we can bring our land back to its original fertile state. This is good business and sound farming practice. Think it over.

A COVERED ARENA

Five weeks from now a committee of the Community Council will be asking citizens for a donation towards the erection of a Memorial Arena in Strathmore. The campaign will start the last week in May, when it is hoped that the bulk of the spring work will have been taken care of.

Great interest was evinced in this matter a month ago at a meeting in the Memorial Hall. It is expected that just as great interest will be shown in helping to make the risk an actuality.

No actual plan has been approved as yet, and no site has been chosen, but it is estimated that the building will cost about $25,000. It is expected such a building should be a complete winter sports arena, comprising not only a hockey rink, but also four sheets of curling ice. The curlers have felt the need to expand beyond their present two sheets, and since they will have to move from their present location to get more space, this is an admirable time for the project.

The Strathmore Branch of the Canadian Legion has erected a Memorial Stone to the fallen of the Second World War, but just as it was felt at the end of the First World War that a simple stone monument was not sufficient memorial, it is felt now that there should be something more than the addition to the monument. An arena will be another continuing memorial, it will be one which will serve a large cross-section of the community, and one which can be useful throughout the year, if particularly so in the winter time.

Since the drive for funds will not commence until late in May, every family will have ample opportunity to consider their possible donation to the building of this memorial. Nearly every family was connected in one way or another with the fighting of this war, and every family should therefore have a part in the rink.

"JUSTICE" OR "LAW"

A large section of the population, in this area particularly, have been incensed for the past few weeks over the treatment accorded Mrs. Laurence McHugh of Gleichen, a British woman who married a Blackfoot Indian from Gleichen, serving in Canada's army overseas, and who thus became classified as an Indian herself, so that when she bought a few bottles of spirits at Bassano recently, she was prosecuted for illegal possession of alcohol. Numerous protests have been voiced over the matter, and considerable feeling has been aroused over the incident.

We have been glad to note such interest in the rights of a fellow citizen. We have been glad to note that there is still an awareness of injustice done.

We are more glad still to see that as a result of the hue and cry stirred up over this seeming injury to Mrs. McHugh, it is likely some changes in the Indian Act may be carried. The matter has apparently been pushed to the point where the absurdity of our legal tangle has been obvious even in Ottawa, where the letter seems to be of so much more importance than is the spirit of the law.

We are glad that it is causing study of this one issue. It may be possible that Mrs. McHugh, through achieving considerable, but probably distasteful, notoriety, will prove a champion of greater freedom for the Indians.

On the other side of the picture, we shall be sorry if this and other instances illustrating the impossibility of completeness in our code of law do not give rise—and we doubt that they will—to some arrangement permitting a judge or a justice to mete out "justice" and not merely "law."

Too often we hear that "in this case, the law is explicit" when common sense tells the judge that the law is not being just. Mrs. McHugh's is a case in point.

THOSE TAXES AGAIN

We noted with interest the other day an editorial reprinted from the Vancouver province, and dealing with the local tax on homes in their city. Following our editorial of last week, we felt it was worth while reprinting elsewhere on this page.

The writer has, we feel, expressed the situation quite clearly. . . and yet we're not in agreement altogether with his arguments on children.

First of all we feel he's being unfair over the issue of the children. Those three children are the greatest contribution his neighbour could make to his neighbourhood and to his home-town. They should far outweigh such considerations as the pretty garden and the tidy home, and the apple-ripeness of his estate.

At the same time we think this writer has offered, without expressing it, one of the best reasons for a revision of the taxation system. The city or the town cannot collect a great deal of taxes from the man who has put his money into an automobile, and into clothing and food for his family of three instead of into his home. In order to be equitable, therefore, it should collect his portion from the avenues where he does spend his money.

The gas tax is out because it is provincial; the sales tax is out. It is a federal affair. So are most other taxes. But there is still the business tax, and this is a fair way for the Town to recover some portion of the money spent by the man who is not spending his money on improving his home.

One has only to look about the town to note homes where improvements are not being added because of the increased assessment which could result. This is fair neither to the home-owner nor to the Town.

AVOID FARM ACCIDENTS

Field activities will soon be general on Alberta farms and farmers should be very careful to avoid accidents in handling their machinery.

Just recently a farmer in the St. Paul district was thrown from his tractor when he struck some ruts in the frozen road. One of the wheels grazed the side of his head and passed over the side of his body, resulting in multiple injuries to his head and face, two fractured ribs, and a punctured lung.

Do not forget that the tractor is the most deadly implement on the farm. Never take a chance while operating a tractor.

For years in flood-mennaced areas across the country we have been talking about conservation, but with a few notable exceptions that is about all that has been done, says The Financial Post editorially. In the meantime millions of tons of rich top soil are washed away each spring and every few years we suffer major property damage.

Like irrigation, flood control is not something that can be put through in a day. There must be general agreement in the area affected, not only of farm owners but also all municipalities along the water to be controlled. Sometimes it takes a mighty flood and terrific damage or, in the case of irrigation, a disastrous and prolonged drought, to put the community in a receptive mood. The process of the partially completed Grand Valley conservation project in southwestern Ontario, however, should be an inspiration.

Admittedly the project is not complete. Before there can be full protection, more dams will have to be built, more lakes created and many more thousands of trees will have to be planted. But already the two or three millions of dollars expended have saved several times that amount of property, the investment will be well worth while from a sanitary and scenic aspect alone.

There is need in Canada for many more Grand Valley conservation projects and for local groups of public-spirited citizens to organize them and get them started. We are not so rich that we can afford to dump billions of dollars of property and good top soil into our rampaging rivers every spring.

FARMER'S COLUMN--

By R. J. M.

FARMERS FEAR OF BLOAT OBSTACLE TO BEST PASTURE

On too many Alberta farms only a small plot of alfalfa is raised. The crop produced is only sufficient for possibly one or two of the many uses it could be put to. There are very few farms on which the acreage of alfalfa, seeded alone or in a mixture could not be increased to advantage.

Alfalfa should be the main legume in forage mixtures used throughout practically all sections of the province but unfortunately is often avoided because of a fear of bloat. It is true that bloat does occur but it is significant that on farms where large acreages of alfalfa are grown and stock are accustomed to it, cases of bloat are practically unheard of.

In order to avoid bloat a few simple precautions should be followed:

1. Add a fairly high proportion of grass to your pasture.
2. Give cattle a good feed of dry hay before turning them in for the first time.
3. Never allow hungry animals to go into a pasture containing alfalfa.
4. Have a supply of dry hay or straw in the pasture at all times.
5. Have water readily available.
6. Treat cattle for warbles in the late winter and early spring so that heel flies won't drive them into shelter in midday. They will return to the pasture later with whetted appetites and bloating may result.

In spite of depleted stocks of many kinds of forage crop seed alfalfa seed is still available. If you do not know where to order seed, see your District Agriculturist. He can tell you and will be glad to give additional information about this valuable crop.

Penalizing Home Lovers

An Editorial in The Vancouver Province

Apart from concern about how much more taxation real estate can stand, there is growing doubt about the fairness of expecting property owners to pay civic bills entirely on the basis of the value of their holdings.

This unfair aspect of our property tax system can best be appreciated if one considers the hypothetical case of two Vancouver men who each earn $2,500 per year, who enjoy the same civic benefits and who, under a fair method of taxation, might expect to pay approximately the same civic taxes.

But they do not pay the same. One of the men is a home lover. He saves his money and builds or buys an attractive home. He sets to work and makes a pretty garden and keeps it and the house in apple pie order. His home is a credit to the city and helps maintain the assessment values and the tax rates of his neighborhood.

The other man does not care for home life. He is content with owning a small, dingy house and devotes his time and money to driving in a luxurious car in which he has invested most of his savings. Unlike the first man he has three children, who each cost the city more than $100 per year to educate.

The first man, the good citizen who should be encouraged, gets a slap in the face from the tax collector. He pays $100 or more per year in civic taxes and now faces the prospect of higher levies.

But the second man, whose children alone cost $300 per year to educate, contributes about half the taxes paid by the first man because he spends his money for other things than real estate. He enjoys the same police and fire protection as the first man, enjoys the parks and boulevards just as much, uses the roads far more and yet pays half as much for all those privileges.

The anomalies of this situation grow more apparent as the civic tax rate rises. Talk of a civic business tax shows the city council realizes property cannot much longer carry the whole burden.

A tax system which penalizes the home owner who helps keep up civic appearances warrants critical scrutiny. Council would do well to search for a fairer means of distributing the tax load.

NIGHTINGALE

By Mrs. F. H.

Mrs. Don Dougan was hostess to the Women's Institute at the hall on Friday April 11. An exchange of Easter eggs or cards was the roll call. Musical arrangements were made for concert and dance of April 18. All members are requested to bring in their papers for the scrap book. A delicious lunch was served at the close of a pleasant social hour.

Mrs. Wm. Joel returned last Thursday after a two week stay at General Hospital in Calgary, where she received medical care.

Mrs. Andy Christofferson and wee son, Allan, came home from Calgary last week.

Johnny Carlson and Harry Trollope Jr. motored from Calgary last Friday, to take in the concert and dance.

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Kinney brought their young daughter, Irene, home from Calgary last Sunday. Everyone is glad to know that she is making a satisfactory recovery from a ruptured appendix.

There was a large appreciative audience at the concert and plays presented by the Woman's Institute last Friday. The three plays were, "Mrs. Goddy Intervenes," "Meet The Chinkos," and "The Magic Monkey." Each performer seemed specially suited to her part and clearly proved that there is much good talent in this Institute.

The pupils of the Senior room supplied several musical numbers and Mr. Harley Hartman sang two solos. Music for dancing was furnished by Bill and Edith Den Boer, Don Murray, and L. G. Kinney, and the fun lasted to an early hour.

Mrs. Curt Slonaker and Emerald returned from a very pleasant visit with relatives in Colorado and Kansas.

Nightingale has organized a ball team for the coming season. Let's all come along and support the boys.

At the regular meeting of the W.I. held in the Hall on Wednesday, April 16, most of the time was spent at quilting. Mrs. Buntain, president, opened the meeting and the creed was said.

It was decided during the afternoon to purchase 6 silver spoons, and 12 W.I. pins. Lunch was served by the hostesses. Mrs. G. Buntain and Mrs. P. Dahn. Roll call was "A Hint On Cleaning." There were 18 members and one visitor present.

Mrs. Sally Dain is at present a patient in the Holy Cross Hospital. We hope her stay in there will be short and that she will be home soon with her family.

LIFE OF THE PARTY

Clifford B. Pope, curator of reptiles at the Chicago Natural Museum, is raising a python in his Winnipeg home. The snake is 6 feet long.

In the idyllic atmosphere of our northern suburb it is growing rapidly. This fact, reports Mr. Pope, "has me reflect on the place of a python in the home and exactly how long a python has to be before it wears out even the welcome of a herpetologist."

When guests drop in, the python is the life of the party. Should it ever become unruly, Mr. Pope has his remedy: "Take a bath towel and wrap it several times around the left hand so as to protect it completely. Push this into the snake's face."

It is an excellent way to deal with "the life of the party" whether python or human. We should like to see it used more often, especially on the latter species.

SEEDING BROME GRASS

If you are including brome in the forage crop mixture you intend to sow for hay or pasture, you will find it better to sow the brome separately. Brome and alfalfa should form the basis of most mixtures used in central and northern Alberta but other kinds may be added if desired. Several kinds of forage crops can be mixed to advantage especially if the field is to be used for pasture.

J. E. Birdsell, Supervisor of Crop Improvement, says that it is difficult to get an even distribution of brome grass if it is mixed with the smaller, heavier seeds of legumes. The best idea is to seed the brome first. If you sow the brome after the legumes there is a danger of distributing the legume seed already sown and getting it down too deep for satisfactory germination.

Very few grass seeder attachments will sow brome grass seed uniformly in fact many of them won't handle brome at all. Because of this, brome seed is usually mixed with grain and sown through the ordinary seeder.

When sowing brome (or any other grass or legume seed) with a grain crop, the rate of seeding for the grain should not be more than one-half the usual rate. Suppose you are sowing a mixture of brome and alfalfa. You will sow the brome first (mixed with grain) through the ordinary seed drill. Let us assume that one bushel of barley and five pounds of brome per acre are to be seeded. Spread ten bushels of barley on a granary or truck floor; pour fifty pounds of brome grass seed over it and mix thoroughly with a shovel. This can be repeated until the desired quantity has been mixed. Sack part of the mixture and weigh it for use in setting the drill.

The seed drill should be set for about one-half of a bushel per acre more than the rate at which the grain is to be seeded. By putting a weighed amount of the seed into the drill after you think it is feeding through at about the proper speed, the rate of seeding can be calculated after an acre or two have been seeded. It is often advisable to go over part of the field a second time when the starting rate is too low. It is difficult to set a drill exactly as you want it, but with patience, a satisfactory adjustment

A Better Potato Crop for You

When you dig your potatoes in the fall, do you save the small ones for seed?

Here's a better way:

Set aside two or three rows in your garden as a seed plot this spring and can be made.

Depth of seeding is one of the most important factors for success with forage crops says Mr. Birdsell. Brome grass seed should not be seeded more than one inch, and smaller seeds not more than one-half inch deep. By seeding into firm soil these depths are possible, and it is essential that the soil be firm if a good stand is to be obtained.

If you want to grow a pure stand of brome you will find the procedure outlined quite satisfactory but the rate of seeding in that case should be from ten to twelve pounds of brome to the acre.

Further information on seeding of legumes and grasses can be obtained from District Agriculturists or from the Field Crops Branch of the Alberta Department of Agriculture.

see that the seed that goes into the plot is the best that you can obtain. If you ask your nurseryman for Foundation A seed potatoes you will have something really worth growing next year — in fact, it's not a bad idea to sow your whole potato garden to Foundation A stock if you can afford it.

Commercial potato growers are advised particularly to set aside a seed plot. Commercial crops can be wonderfully improved in this way at a very small cost. The commercial grower could well consider planting half an acre or an acre of Certified or Foundation A seed. The crop from this plot will give you plenty of good commercial seed for next year.

All good commercial potato growers are invited to look over the list of those who have good seed potatoes for sale. This list is available at the Field Crops office of the Alberta Department of Agriculture on the ground floor of the Parliament Buildings. If you can't call at the office, phone for information to J. L. Eaglesham at 916318.

Whether you are growing potatoes for your own table or for sale, it pays to plant the best. Poor seed can no more produce a good yield of good potatoes than a scrub bull can produce quality calves.

Classified ads are many things to many people. They are buyers for some and sellers for others. They do big jobs for small costs.

FOR CLEANER FIELDS AND BETTER YIELDS

Under The Street Lamp

by PAT O'HOOLEY

This is PAT O'HOOLEY

A Consultant, says Keith Baldwin, is a man who knows less about your business than you do and gets paid more for telling you how to run it than you could possibly make out of it even if you ran it right instead of the way he told you.

The man who coined the phrase "clean as a whistle," declaims Lyda McLean, never heard the boys down by the drugstore on a spring evening.

Pete de Kort was passing on. "Well, Pete," said John de Kort, "have ye made peace with God and denounced the devil?" "Sure, and I've made peace with God, said Pete, but I'm in no position to antagonize anybody."

They say that Jimmy Brown got word of the "big event" by a telegram reading: "Your wife gave birth to a daughter this morning." Across the top of the telegram was printed: "When you want a boy, call Canadian Pacific Telegrams."

"Well, George, my boy," said his uncle, "my congratulations! I hear you're engaged to one of the pretty Robbins twins."

"That's right," replied George Keeling, heartily.

"But," said his uncle, "How on earth do you manage to tell them apart?"

"Oh," said George, "I don't try."

Bob Gray: "Scotland has turned out a great many pipers and is still turning them out."

Ian MacKenzie: "Well, you can't blame her."

HALF SPEED

A United States army officer stationed in Australia decided to go on a kangaroo hunt. He climbed into his jeep and instructed his driver to proceed to the plains inquest of a kangaroo. Soon they spotted one, and the driver drove the jeep in hot pursuit. For some time they went at break-neck speed without gaining on the animal.

Finally the driver shouted to the officer: "Ain't no use chasin' that thing sir!"

"Why, Sam."

"Cause we is now doin' '65, and that critter ain't put his front feet down yet!"

NEW AUTO CARRIERS:

A new Canadian Pacific automobile car designed for speedier handling of the new models now rolling off assembly lines was inspected yesterday (March 24) at Pace Viger freight yards by W. M. Neal, the chairman and president of the C.P.R., accompanied by W. P. Tully, general superintendent of the Quebec district (at right). Larger than former cars of this type, with extra wide loading doors, 620 of these cars are being added to Canadian Pacific rolling stock this year with 204 received up to yesterday on a 25-day delivery schedule. In the car can be seen the loading arrangement which places one auto above the other to make the best possible use of space.

HAVE GIVEN FARMERS MILLIONS OF TREES

Free trees are supplied to farmers in the Prairie Provinces for shelter-belt planting by the Dominion Forest Nursery Stations at Indian Head and Sutherland, Sask. These trees are grown and distributed by the Stations. Broadleaf trees are supplied free of charge, while a small charge is made for evergreen trees, the planters paying express charges on shipment. Up to and including the Spring of 1946, over 200 millions of broadleaf trees have been distributed to more than 1,000 planters every year, and practically five millions of evergreen trees to more than 800 planters annually.

For the most part, the Forest Nursery Stations and the planters have concentrated attention on establishing farm and home shelter belts for the purpose of providing protection to people, livestock, gardens, and buildings, but during the past 15 years many farmers have given some attention to planting field shelterbelts for the purpose of improving conditions for crops grown under field conditions.

FINANCE AT LARGE

By WELLINGTON JEFFERS, Financial Editor.

Amazing Case of George M. Odium, Wiltshire, Who Won Libel Suit Against County Committee And Made Boomerang of Poor Farming Charge

Early in the war I heard a British scientific agriculturist tell Canadian scientific agriculturists about the plan in Britain to control British farm output from London through county and district agricultural committees with the object of getting exactly what food was wanted and to remove such farmers as showed "inefficiency" or unwillingness to collaborate with the orders from central. It all sounded quite logical and likely to work in a time of war, and the impression left was that the British Government hoped in this manner to have best farming practice in every farm.

Farmers Didn't Like It

From time to time I have heard repercussions from the farmer thus regimented. In its outline the policy was not all sweetness and reason. Strange to say many men on committees became quite dictatorial, were not willing to admit that the judgment of the farmer on the spot as to soil, animals, best methods might sometimes be right, and roughly cut across the farmer's plans developed through a lifetime. I have no figures on the net results, and would like to see a report of an independent commission on whether the plan was good in time of war for the nation or not. However, the powers given were too great, and I do not think they would be liked any better in Canada than they seem to have been in many rural parts of the British Isles.

I have just read the judgment of Mr. Justice Atkinson in the case of George Milton Odium versus E. Stratton. It occupies 12 columns of the Wiltshire Gazette. In itself an indication of how much importance is attached to it by Britons at home. George Milton Odium happened to be very proud of his ability as a farmer. He was himself a scientific agriculturist, had been called in consultation on farm matters by 35 different countries and had wide practical as well as scientific experience. In 1926 this consulting expert bought the Manor Farm at Manningford, Wiltshire, a mixed farm of 300 acres. He decided to go in for Friesian cattle and eventually developed an attested herd of 237 Friesian cattle, one of the finest in the British Isles and free from tuberculosis. His farm buildings were among the finest, he had hydro power developed, put in pumps to provide water, gave light to all his cattle, had a grain mill, milking machines and refrigerators and saw benches.

Experts Clash
Mr. Odium gave great attention to soil analysis, not only to the owner constituents but to the actual experience with each type of fertilizer in conveying to the soil what it needed. He bred 52 cows which gave over 2,000 gallons annually a year and some of them over 3,000 gallons of certified milk. Up to 1939 it was purely a dairy farm. His books were most complete and revealed the history of every field as well as animal. Only two fields were arable and the rest grazing land, but when the war broke Mr. Odium decided he would have to produce food for sale and set aside one acre for heavy forage for every two acres set aside to produce grain to help the food supply.

It would seem that all this would fit in with the overall program of the nation, but when county and district agricultural committees were formed, he did not see eye to eye with Mr. Odium. They had power to order any farmer to do anything he wished "and to override his wishes in as dictatorial a way as they chose to adopt." For awhile the national idea was that animals should go and growing of crops should be the main effort. Mr. Odium's idea was that milk output was of the greatest value to the nation. He obeyed every order given him about plowing lands and selling cattle, but in most cases stated his own views as to the wisdom of the courses taken. His results showed that his methods were good, the judge found, but eventually in 1942, when he was offered $250,000 by the then Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Hudson, he accepted.

Better Farmer Than Critics

There would have been no more about the matter except that in August, 1943, 13 months later, the plaintiff saw in the press a description of the itinerary of a visit to farms made by newspapermen in which occurred these words about the Manor Farm, "This farm was taken over last summer by Mr. Hudson, and was in very poor condition, but is now showing excellent crops." As a farmer Mr. Odium considered this very damaging to his reputation, found out that this was part of a handout and took action in the courts where he was fully sustained. Various allegations were made against his farming in defense, but not one of them was found to be correct. Moreover, the various orders to Mr. Odium while he was a farmer and his replies were withheld on the ground that it would not be in the public interest to publish them.

Mr. Justice Atkinson was convinced of the complete veracity and reliability of Mr. Odium but about the chief committee witness said, "He has satisfied me that he was giving a lot of untrue evidence, and that he was acting in a malicious manner as regards the plaintiff." In fact, criticism of Mr. Odium turned out in the end to be criticism of the committee because when eventually the committee adopted the policy advocated at first by Mr. Odium they criticized him for not having done it even though he had abandoned the right policy on their orders. The committee later on said milk was No. 1 priority which had been Mr. Odium's view from the beginning. Meanwhile, his fine herd suffered attrition and was mixed with inferior animals.

Would It Happen Here?

The committee argued that drains were not in good condition, but Mr. Odium had asked for Italian prisoners a year before to put them in better condition. They said the farm was in poor condition when taken over, but the evidence showed the reverse. The herd was excellent and a fine herd cannot be kept on poor land. They said cattle were bad but evidence showed they were excellent. The judge found that the committee was to blame for unsatisfactory performance after the farm was taken from Mr. Odium and were trying to shift the blame. He awarded damages exceeding $2,000 against the chief executive officer of the committee but the Agricultural Ministry undertook to indemnify the officer against any damages. The justice found this an amazing procedure.

I have given this case at length because from time to time it has been suggested that similar policies should be followed in Canada. Doubtless most committees in England would not have men who could be guilty of such libels and of such bungling. Such incidents are inherent, however, in any handling of extreme authority over to men whose judgment will be regarded as infallible and who will regard themselves as beyond the reach of reprisals or of penalties. I am sure that the Departments of Agriculture in Canada have seen of great value to farmers in advisory capacities, but as supreme matters over agriculture they could be very totalitarian. Such power nearly always corrupts in any field of endeavor. We have been accustomed to think of the action of the Russian Government against the Kulaks as impossible in western lands. Once hand over extreme powers to governments and in any country some exhibition of power far beyond that described in Odium versus Stratton is possible.

next Thursday. There will also be a Mother's Day musical program.
